Israel Need Not Fear the Fake Time-Bomb of Palestinian Demographics

Dear Friend of FLAME:

The urgency for Israel to resolve the problem of the Palestinian Arab territories is in large part predicated on a commonly theorized demographic time-bomb that will supposedly create an Arab majority between the Jordan River and the Mediterranean Sea within just a few years. This would presumably destroy Jewish self-determination—and with it the Jewish state.

This nonsensical commonplace—most frequently purveyed by Americans and Israelis of the left/progressive persuasion—is predicated on a fraudulent 1997 census administered by the Palestinian Authority. In 2017, a less rigorous count of the Palestinian Arabs living in the disputed territories used the 1997 census as a base, and multiplied the fraud.

Here's how the "Demographic Time-Bomb" argument works:

The 1997 population reported for the territories, 3.8 million, combined with the 1.2 million Arabs living in Israel proper, yielded a 1997 total of 5 million Arabs, from the River to the Sea.

With a projected Palestinian population growth rate of nearly five percent per year, the scary prediction was that the combined Arab population between the River and the Sea would surpass the Jewish population of roughly 5.8 million in about two decades.

Sure enough, the 2017 "count" showed an Arab population of 4.7 million in the disputed territories. The 2019 Israeli census found 1.9 million Arab Israelis, so the River to the Sea total of Arabs would seem to be 6.6 million. This is quite close to the 2019 Jewish population of Israel, which totaled 6.7 million.

According to the more gullible demographers, these numbers prove that an Israeli annexation of Judea, Samaria and Gaza will imminently yield an Arab voting majority in the expanded nation.

Even omitting Gaza and its alleged 1.9 million Palestinian Arabs, the theorists warn, will only spare Israel a Palestinian Arab majority for a decade or so, given

YOU DESERVE TO KNOW THE TRUTH...

What Is "Palestinian Territory"?

Mainstream media often refers to "Palestinian territory," yet there is no such legal entity. The land—Judea-Samaria—is occupied and under a peace agreement.

The phrase "occupied Palestinian territory" implies illegal Israeli control over the entire Jewish homeland. As yet, Israel's presence is neither permanent nor the final, nor is it meant to be. It is a temporary measure, agreed upon with the Palestinians and international law.

What are the facts?

Israel's administration of Judea-Samaria, far from being illegal, has a peaceful history. In fact, Israel's initial occupation was welcomed by the Arab population. It has provided a high standard of living, including education, health care, and economic growth. It has also provided a high standard of living for the Jewish population. It is a peaceful and successful administration.

Why have a 2000 year history in the Middle East?

The Bible provides a long and detailed history of the Jewish people, including the Jewish Kingdom of David in 1000 B.C.E. and the Jewish Kingdom of Herod in 37 B.C.E. The Jewish people have lived in the land of Judea-Samaria for over 3,000 years, except during Jewish exile (586-520 B.C.E.) and the Arab occupation (1948-1967), when Jews were ethnically cleansed.

Why are the majority population in 60% of Judea-Samaria Jewish?

The Jewish population in the area of Judea-Samaria is approximately 400,000. The Arab population is approximately 200,000. The Jewish population is approximately 40% of the total population.

Why is there a voting rights in Judea-Samaria by international law?

The United Nations Security Council Resolution 242 (1947) states that the Jewish people have a right to self-determination in their own land. The United Nations Security Council Resolution 242 (1947) also states that the Jewish people have a right to a state of their own in the land of Judea-Samaria.

the inexorable march of demographic destiny.

For this reason alone, Israel has no choice, it is argued, than to give the Palestinian Arabs their own state, if only to ensure that Israel retains both its Jewishness and its democracy.

The only teensy fly in this ointment, however, is that the census and projections that the PA provided were utter fictions. The PA's census numbers were far higher than the best Israeli government estimates—breathtakingly so. As Israeli demographers, such as Yoram Ettinger, looked into the details of the PA census, it quickly became clear that the census' methodology was fatally flawed. There were double-counts of many people, ludicrous birth and death statistics, immigration assumptions that bore no relationship to reality, violations of international census standards, and direct conflicts with publicly available data from other PA agencies and world bodies.

Here are just a few of the 1997 fraud's elements:

- The entire Arab population of Jerusalem of almost 300,000 souls was double-counted—they were included in both the Israeli and PA census figures.
- 400,000 Palestinian Arabs who live permanently abroad were counted by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics (PCBS). This is a major census no-no by all accepted world standards.
- Compared with birth and death records from the Palestine Central Election Commission and the Palestinian Departments of Health and Education, the PA's approved PCBS count simply invented babies and reanimated corpses by the tens of thousands. In some cities, the reported death rate was zero, and Palestinians born in 1847 were resurrected for census purposes.
- The PA census invented tens of thousands of immigrants into the territories, when in fact, there has been net emigration from the territories according to Israeli border control and immigration data. Emigration varies, but is typically between 10,000 and 25,000 per year. This means that the Palestinian territories actually lost at least 200,000 residents between the two alleged censuses.
- Between 1997 and 2003, Palestinian Arabs who wed Israeli Arabs won automatic Israeli citizenship. There were over 100,000 of them, and they and their (Israeli) children are also double-counted by the PCBS.
- The number of first-grade children and births tabulated in a World Bank study—as well as by the PA's own Department of Education—is tens of thousands fewer than the PCBS "counted."

In short, the PA's census bureau simply made it up as they went along to satisfy the pre-determined population figures that party bosses in Ramallah demanded.

The probable actual 1997 total of Arabs living in the disputed territories was inflated by approximately 50% for the census—about 1.2 million extra residents. The actual total of Palestinian Arabs back in 1997 was 2.6 million, and the likely total in the more recent study is little over 3.2 million—not the 4.7 million alleged by the PA.

Combined with Israeli Arabs, the touted demographic time-bomb simply disappears: Between the River and the Sea today, Israeli Jews out-number the Arabs by 6.7 million to 5.1 million.

But the demographic good news for Israel goes even deeper. Jewish Israelis' fertility rates have boomed in the past 20 years, while Palestinian fertility rates have plummeted: Palestinians have shifted from rural to urban settings, Palestinians have received far more education and access to birth control—thanks to Israel—and Palestinian women particularly are literate, better educated, and work-engaged.

It is tempting to attribute Israeli fecundity to the ultra-orthodox population boom, but the opposite is true. Orthodox women are producing smaller families, while Israel's secular families are growing more rapidly. In fact, the aggregate fertility rate for Israeli Jews is now 3.2, while it is 3.1 for Palestinian Arabs.

In other words, the favorable demographics for Jews are likely to accelerate, not slow down.

There may be many valid reasons for Israel and its friends to desire disengagement from the disputed territories. However, the demographic threat of an Arab majority has no legitimacy whatsoever.

As you discuss the future of Israel as a Jewish democracy with friends, family and colleagues, I urge you to explain the bogus statistics of Palestinian population claims. Population figures should play no role—and certainly not impose false urgency—for Israel and its supporters in seeking a just and peaceful resolution of the issues between the Jewish nation and its adversaries.

P.S. Critics of Israel, from The New York Times to BDS and the United Nations, usually base their condemnation of Israel on the accusation that Israel's settlements (or its "occupation of Palestinian territory") are illegal. These accusations are false and deserve to be exposed once and for all. That's why FLAME has created a new hasbarah message called "What Is "Palestinian Territory"?" I hope you'll review this hard-hitting paid editorial, which will begin running in national media this month. It provides a plain-English explanation of the legal issues surrounding Israel's historical and entirely legal presence in its Biblical homeland. This piece will also be sent to all members of Congress, Vice President Pence and President Trump.
